John Williams

I first fell in love with Coolgardie back in 1986 when I was living in town and working as geologist, then went on into the development and management of other mines in the area. Since then, I have been involved with numerous mining prospects and projects and dealt with many government bodies and councils.

I have a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Sydney. I can understand reports, plans, policies, budgets, strategic plans, and local laws. I won't be shy in asking questions on council and these skills will help me represent our community.

My wife Debbie and I live and work in Coolgardie and we are very keen on protecting our town's historic buildings; promoting local businesses; preventing any more loss of amenity and help to ensure Coolgardie remains a great place to live.
